

February 7, 2007

Dear STS Customer:

I am pleased to announce that Internet Commerce Corporation (ICC) has acquired STS. Under the terms of the agreement, ICC assumes full control of the STS operations effectively immediately.

An Industry Leader

ICC, headquartered in Norcross, GA, is a trusted provider of EDI and e-commerce solutions for thousands of businesses, regardless of their size and level of technical sophistication. Like STS, ICC has an operation in Carrollton, Georgia that focuses on providing support for the EDI needs of suppliers serving the retail industry. Thus, I believe the combination of STS and ICC is a win for STS customers, who will continue to benefit from an organization much like STS with a focus on the retail industry, expertise in EDI, and world-class customer support.

Visit www.icc.net to learn more about ICC.

Business as Usual

There will be no change in your day-to-day interaction with the STS business. Though ICC has assumed day-to-day operational control of the business, the same people, Tony and Steve, and systems that you've worked with will continue to service your needs.

Enclosed with this correspondence is a letter from Tom Stallings, ICC's CEO, an FAQ document to provide answers to some of your most pressing questions and your February invoice. Steve and Tony, along with the ICC management team are also ready to handle and address any issues or concerns you might have.

STS is proud to have helped you over the years. I am confident that ICC will continue to deliver the quality in support that you've come to expect from STS. I wish you the best as your business flourishes with the help of Steve and Tony and other members of the ICC team.

Sincerely,

Blaize Stewart